

Do you want to help others grow themselves, and drastically improve health and safety along the way?

Your mission, if you choose to accept it, is to bring free-flowing ideas, perspectives and stories to refresh and recharge, leading to positive, effective and rewarding action-taking.

If that's you, you're in the right place. Welcome, to the Safety on Tap Podcast.

If you'd rather watch than read, check out this pre-interview video [here]

I'm Andrew Barrett, some people call me Baz (feel free to!). I am that guy - wanting to make a dent in the world, always keen to grow myself. I only got that sporadically, but when I did I was refreshed and recharged. I was more positive, I think I took more effective action, and I definitely felt more rewarded in my job.

But it's difficult to get that as much as I would like, with so many competing demands.

Apparently I'm not alone.

So Safety on Tap was born - where I bring our listeners interesting and inspiring people with different ideas, perspectives and stories, straight to their phone or computer, for their listening pleasure, whenever it suits them.

But this is not just about many, isolated individuals listening to the Safety on Tap podcast in the gym, during lunch, or walking the dog - no, this is a community of like-minded people. This will enable connection with people, to start a conversation with the tribe of listeners. We are not alone!

Now this isn't just for people who have a 'health and safety' job. There are so many more people involved in drastically improving health and safety - supervisors, HR professionals, business owners, health and safety reps, CEO's, health professionals, RTW coordinators.....the list goes on.

Everyone and anyone in business has a role to play, in which we help them through the podcast.

And those people listening very closely will quickly work out that whilst our focus might link with health and safety, Safety on Tap actually helps WAY beyond health and safety - personal effectiveness, business strategy, people leadership, innovation and creativity....keep your ears, and your mind, open!

Format

Safety on Tap is an interview-style podcast. We'll discuss a general theme and a few guiding questions before recording, but ultimately our interview is just a natural chat. I don't like surprises, so having a rough plan is the goal, without being scripted. If there are any no-go areas, let me know.

This is not for explicit self-promotion, but by being of service to our listeners you will no doubt improve your personal brand. If you are a speaker at the 2016 National Health and Safety Conference, we will be specifically promoting you as a speaker at that conference. Your topic may or may not directly relate to your conference talk, as long as it's refreshing and recharging for our listeners!

The interview is recorded over Skype (audio-only), which takes approximately 30 mins. We suggest you allow 45 mins for any pre-recorded clarification, bloopers (which we'll edit out) and any technical issues.

Your voice will sound most amazing if you download Skype to your phone, and use this for the call, preferably with a WiFi connection. The sound quality on the phone is best, so don't use a hands-free headset. If you need a hand with Skype or creating an account, please let me know as early as possible.

Schedule

The podcast is released weekly, usually on a Monday. I'll let you know the release schedule for your podcast, which we record a few weeks prior. I'll also let you know when your podcast is on-air, so you can share this with your friends, colleagues and professional networks.

What I need from you

- A nice profile photo
- An interesting personal bio
- Agreement on a theme, topic and some guiding questions
- Confirmation that you have Skype setup, and your Skype handle
- Suggested times to record the podcast

Boring but important legal stuff

Once we hit record, and publish any associated information you provide, we're creating something permanent, which you consent to when you start the interview. Any such record the Safety on Tap podcast creates is intellectual property to which we retain full reserved rights.

If you are a speaker at the 2016 National Health and Safety Conference, the rights to your podcast intellectual property are vested in the Safety Institute of Australia, which licenses them for use by the Safety on Tap podcast, produced by Fidesa Pty Ltd.

About Andrew (Baz)

I'm a dad and a husband, and I enjoy enjoying life. I'm the Chief Change Agent at Fidesa. We help businesses and individuals through change, in particular health and safety improvement.

My mission is to help those needing the most help - small and medium businesses, to share with them a drastically different, simple and practical approach to health and safety. I'm disrupting how traditional health and safety services are delivered in that space.

I love working with teams, and individuals (usually those working in health and safety), guiding them through a journey of improvement. Facilitator, coach, mentor. That's me!

And I speak (a lot, some might say). I share insights, tips and stories to bigger audiences as an engaging, effective and economical way to support growing people, and drastically improving health and safety along the way.

If you want to learn more about me and how I'm changing the world, check out www.fidesa.com.au/about